Management of others – After you've successfully passed the test of being able to supervise others, you are ready for the next step in becoming a top-notch leader.

The role of a general manager – Up until now, you've been in charge of regular workers, or associates, but managing managers is a complicated task and a responsibility that requires a set of skills that not every "leader" has.

1) Take a Kolbe A Test and write down your score.

2) Delegate your first tasks according to this process: "First, you assign a task. Then you assign the responsibility. Then you ask them to own the results. Finally, you ask them to own the outcome, which is repeated results over time."

3) Go through the phases of the leadership pipeline. Where are you now and what's the best next step to take to advance your development?
